Kyle J. Saylor

Associate

Overview

Beyond the legal questions, estate planning addresses deeply personal and often challenging subject matters. As an Associate in the Business and Trust and Estate Practice Groups, Mr. Saylor concentrates his practice on assisting clients as they navigate the difficult decisions that arise from preparing and administering estate plans.

Kyle prepares estate plans for clients with various needs and circumstances, including individuals with blended families, individuals who care for family members with special needs, and individuals with non-citizen spouses. He assists clients in creating estate plans that address federal gift and estate tax, generation skipping tax, capital gains tax, and state estate taxes. When it is necessary to ensure consistency in all aspects of an estate plan, Kyle works closely with a client's financial advisers and accountants. He drafts a full suite of estate planning documents, including wills, trusts, pre and post marital agreements, cohabitation agreements, health care powers of attorney, and financial powers of attorney. As a member of the Business Law Practice Group and to ensure no asset is excluded for an estate plan, Kyle assists our corporate clients with business succession planning.

In addition to representing clients in trust and estate matters, Kyle has represented a District of Columbia licensed medical cannabis facility. With a primary focus on compliance, Kyle served as a liaison between the facility managers, the District of Columbia Department of Health, accountants, investors, and financial institutions.

Prior to joining Jackson & Campbell, P.C., Kyle spent five years working as an estate planning attorney at the Weidenfeld Law Firm in the District of Columbia. Kyle graduated from Syracuse University College of Law with a J.D. in 2012 and from Keuka College with a Bachelor of Science in Management in 2007.
