Website Privacy Statement

Jackson & Campbell, P.C. is committed to protecting the privacy of visitors to this website. This policy statement describes how Jackson & Campbell collects and uses information relating to website visitors.

Cookies and Log Files

Jackson & Campbell receives non-personally identifiable information through cookies and log files when individuals access the Jackson & Campbell website. Cookies are small computer files that are transferred from our website to your computer to collect certain technical information, such as IP address, page views, operating system, web browser software, and referring and destination websites. Log files are created on our server and collect similar information, including the date and time that each IP address visits our website. These tools allow the statistical monitoring of how many people are utilizing the Jackson & Campbell website, how often it is visited and the length of stay. We use the information gathered from cookies and log files solely to generate demographic and user statistics to improve the content of its website. There is no linking of information obtained from cookies or log files to identifying personal information.

Google Analytics

In addition to the cookies and log files generated by Jackson & Campbells web server, this website uses Google Analytics, an analytics service provided by Google, Inc. (Google). The service uses cookies to help us analyze how visitors use our website. The information generated by the cookies about your use of the website (including your IP address) is transmitted to and stored by Google. Google uses this information to assess use of this website and to issue reports on website activity for website operators. Google also may transfer this information to third parties. You may refuse the use of cookies by Google Analytics and the Jackson & Campbell server by selecting the appropriate setting on your browser; please note however that declining cookies may affect your ability to access the full functionality of this or other websites.

Newsletters and Client Advisories

Apart from those who form attorney-client relationships with us, the only identifying personal information that Jackson & Campbell collects is the information that you voluntarily provide to us when, for example, you submit a request to receive newsletters or advisories, or when you contact Jackson & Campbell by e-mail. This information is used solely to address your request for information, to respond to your email or to include you on one of our mailing lists.

Information Disclosure Practices
